names from the poll-books was begun.

Considerable opposition to the ordinance has become apparent in the last few days, and at the last meeting of the Board of Aldermen the ordinance was repealed.

At the City Democratic Committee meeting last night the subject was discussed.

Mr. Charles 1. Phillips characterized the ordinance as badly advised; he believed it could do no good and the changing of voters from one precinct to another would occasion loss of votes. "Clay Ward don't want it now or at any other time. I am sure. I live in Clay Ward and I am aware of the wishes of the people. The Republicans.

The members of the Clay Ward Republican Club held a meeting at Reinhardt's Hall last night, to hear the report of the committee appointed at a previous meeting to draft resolutions, expressing the sentiment of the club with reference to the recent withdrawal of several Republicans of the city from the party.

About fifty members of the club were present including about fifteen additions to the old membership.

Mr. Duesberry reported a series of resolutions. The resolutions were prefaced by a long "whereas," in which the names of the members who have withdrawn are quoted, and their withdrawn given as the cause of the resolutions. After severely denouncing the action of their exbrethren, and giving them a "thorough excoriation," the following resolutions are attached:

1. That we part with this gentry feeling no pain in the dissolution whatever.

2. That we affirm our principles as true and steadfast Republicans, not to be bought by office a property.

to climate and soil being exactly the contrary.

That general agriculture is depressed is everywhere conceded. Exactions, burdens, and restrictions, imperceptibly growing year and year, a surplus of uncultivated land, and a want of capital have reduced the ownership and cultivation of land in a majority of the counties merely to the securing of a support for the owner and his family.

Good roads and the drainage of private estics are of paramount advantage to the farmers of the State. The Uaikad States bepartment of Agriculture has not sent any seeds to this Department. The dairying and live-stock interests of the State have increased. In the raising of hogs there has been no change.

Mrs. Sabine Rueger, the beloved wife of Mr. Lewis Rueger, died at her residence at No. 1801 Pleasant street, Strecker's Hill, vesterlay morning at 2:45 o'clock. Mrs. Rueger had been a resident of Richmond since 1852. In 1853 she married Mr. Louis Rueger, and the silver wedding of that couple in 1878 was a grand social event. Mr. Louis Rueger has lived in Richmond nearly fifty years, and was for a long time at Nmth and Bank streets, where his son is now.

Mrs. Rueger leaves several children, her sons being among our best known and respected citizens. She was a sister of Mr. William II. Zimmermann, and was held in high esteem by all who knew her.

The funeral will take place this afternoon, at 3 o'clock, from 81, John's German Lutheran church, at the corner of Eighth and Marshall streets. The pall-bearers are as follows: Active—Charles Saelzer, Louis Euker, Henry Grimmell, M. Schaaf, Lewis Bloom, John Braner, H. Keppler, M. Briet, Honorary—J. F. Kohler, Charles Haase, Adam Moll, B. Hassell, George A. Bock, Jacob Ebel, H. Schmidt, William Schaaf, Colonel Smith, Major Gaines, Mr. Corbin, and Judge Henley discussed at length the question of roads, after which Major Gaines offered a resolution that the Commissioner of Agriculture be instructed to invite some competent engineer to read a paper before the next Farmers' Institute (next year) upon the necessity, economy, and ameliorating influences of a good system of public roadways upon the welfare and progress of a community.

A motion was adopted that Judge Henley, as president of the Beard, should make a supplemental report to the Governor.

check human intercourse by quaratimes and cordons, as Sir Joseph Fayrer laid down; but we must deal with the individual, destroy the germs of infection, and prevent the growth of fayorable media in heaps of dead materials. Sir Thomas Crawford's new "categorical imperative" is "Starve the microbe, and save the man."

The waste of disease is a telling point, it touches the pocket, and brings common sense to the aid of science. The loss to the army by sickness is equal, we are told, to "a force of 10,716 men, and at £1 week the loss from sickness in the army amounted to the very considerable sum of £557, 232." It civil life the loss by sickness is put at allout twenty million weeks' work in the year, "or about one-fortieth part of the work done in the year of the whole ; opulation" between the ages of fifteen and sixty-five. Sir Thomas Crawford described this total loss as "a river of national waste of almost incalculable value, daily and nighty passing our doors, which a united and intelligent effort ought to be able to stem." Waste of life means waste of money, of cheerfulness, of rotional vigor, and expansion. Our recruits, our gaols, our reformatory institutions, our vagrant and mendicant classes, all supply evidence of physical deterioration. Civilization will devour her own children unless knowledge and personal effort come to the rescue. The and mendicant classes, all supply evidence of physical deterioration. Civilization will devour her own children unless knowledge and personal effort come to the rescue. The type will change. Physiognomists point to Elizabethan and Victorian portraits and declare that it has changed already. Faces are less broad, they say; chins are narrower, eyes are smaller, heads are less round, shoulders are more angular, and the poise of power has given place to the weakness of hesitation and want of will. Perhaps things are not so bad as this, but the working class has suffered more than the middle and upper classes, as a walk in the streets of any manufacturing town will serve to show.

To avert this waste we must devote our energies to more matters than mere sanitation, and have more faith in social and less in State enforcement. Here we are wasting twenty million weeks in a year in sickness while workmen themselves want a shorter day of labor. Cannot we unite our hopes white workmen themselves want a shorter day of labor. Cannot we unite our hopes and forces? Long hours, under unhealthy conditions, lead to lassitude, and the drink crave follows as a matter of course, with all the other demons that come in its train. Inducaza-germ, cholera-germ, and every other kind of germ find their opportunity in an enfeebled body. Given a higher standard of health, we might save three fourths of the twenty million weeks, turn out more satisfactory work, and have more time for recreation. An eight-hours' day has thus the sanction of sanitary science behind it. It would do something to prevent that waste of human life which rans by us like a river "rich with dead men's souls."—Pall-Mall Gazette.
